FUTURE OUTLOOK

Following the NDA (National Democratic Alliance) victory in the recently concluded general elections, expectations are now exceptionally high from the new Government with regards to reforms and governance. The clear electoral mandate given to a single party reduces political uncertainty and raises the potential for economic policy reform.

The New Government faces a daunting task of reversing a declining economic trend. It could be 8 to 12 months before we can see any green shoots of recovery. However, market may not wait till then and price in positive policy as well as administrative actions.

The fact that we will have a decisive Government is a good thing, but the coming 100 days are going to be very important the cabinet formation, the budget, even some indications of how the government is going to move to get the economy back on track, all these will be very important events to watch.

After the allocation of portfolios, the first litmus test for the new Government would be the Budget which is due sometime in July. Already expectations are building up for big ticket reforms to be announced before the budget, but will they happen only time will tell.

The budget document is expected to give the right signals specially with respect to subsidy policy and overall fiscal stance. The budget may also benefit from articulating appropriate contingencies for a probable disruption to food production this year.

Industry is expectantly waiting for NDA's clarity on FDI issues in sectors like Insurance, Retail, Banking etc. Lot of policy actions is required in sectors like Mining, Power, Infrastructure, Real Estate etc. The entire world shall have a keen eye on the policy reforms which India would undertake. In view of the above, the new Government has to start firing all cylinders without wasting time. And if that happens, unprecedented amount of foreign money shall flow into India, which will be good for Indian market and economy and will in turn also boost our business prospects.

A) Underlying economic Current parameters remained weak for India throughout FY14.

- a) Official estimates place economic growth for FY14 at 4.9% supported by strong agricultural growth of 4.6%.
- b) A deep slowdown continued in the mining and manufacturing sectors. In fact, it was the first time since 1991-92 that India's Mfg sector contracted during FY14.
- c) Services sector covering 60.0% of the economy is estimated to have grown by a lower 6.9%.

B) High & persistent inflation remained a key macroeconomic risk during FY14. While WPI-based inflation averaged at 5.9%, CPI-based inflation averaged at 9.5%.

Despite growth concerns, RBI had to raise the policy rate by 75 bps during May'13 to Jan'14.

C) Around June-July, 2013, India was faced with significant debt capital outflows and pressures on its currency, equity and bond markets, as global liquidity conditions tightened.

- a) The RBI controlled the situation by tightening liquidity, relaxing limits on FDI, ECBs and encouraging NRI remittances and sharply increasing gold import duties.
- b) India's external vulnerabilities fell significantly in H2, FY14 helped by policy actions to shrink the CAD & strengthen capital flows.

D) Indian banking sector witnessed relatively lower business expansion (deposits up 14.6% & credit up 14.3%) with continued stresses on asset quality and restructured loan-books.

History was re-written in India as the Country found a strong leader and gave its most decisive mandate to him.
